ROOF GARDEN

A roof garden is a garden on the roof of a building. Besides the decorative benefit, roof plantings may provide food, temperature control, hydrological benefits, architectural enhancement, habitats or corridors

[1] for wildlife, recreational opportunities, and in large scale it may even have ecological benefits. The practice of cultivating food on the rooftop of buildings is sometimes referred to as rooftop farming.

[2] Rooftop farming is usually done using green roof, hydroponics, aeroponics or air-dynaponics systems or container gardens.

Roof gardens are most often found in urban environments. Plants have the ability to reduce the overall heat absorption of the building which then reduces energy consumption. "The primary cause of heat build-up in cities is insolation, the absorption of solar radiation by roads and buildings in the city and the storage of this heat in the building material and its subsequent re-radiation. Plant surfaces however, as a result of transpiration, do not rise more than 4–5 °C above the ambient and are sometimes cooler.

WALL GARDENS

What is a walled garden? How to design an attractive private place within our own garden? We shall show you beautiful walled gardens and give you some useful ideas for the layout and design so that you can have your dream backyard retreat.

As the name suggests, a walled garden is a garden enclosed by high walls. Such gardens appeared back in Medieval times and were usually enclosed by hedges, a stone wall or a fence. In the Middle Ages, the walls surrounded castles and gave shelter and protection to the local population in dangerous times. Inside the walls the gardens provided food and medical plants to the population.

With the development of landscaping, the idea of a walled garden changed and potager gardens slowly turned to decorative gardens and became a secure, secluded spot where people could relax in peace and quiet.
